Hello Bill – The Engineer and Risk Assessor have completed their revisions and there is no longer a inhalation risk. I am revising my briefing paper to be presented next week. Your current suspension period expires 12/18 and a suspension is needed. Thanks

Geraldine,

Good morning again. Just wanted to follow up on the status of the PMN.

Was the Engineer able to revise his assessment as we discussed on 11/28 ?

If so, your next step was to re-submit to a review committee (hopefully) for approval ?

Please let me know if my understanding of the process moving forward is correct.

The current suspension period was set to expire on T 12/18.

Thank you.

Okay, thanks.

Another 15-day suspension period will be fine. Please notify me when the engineer completes his review.

██████ – I apologize for the delay in responding. I am waiting for the engineer to complete his assessment of the information that you provided. He has indicated that his review should be completed by next week. Your day 90 is November 18 and I will need to put in another suspension. Thanks

Geraldine,
Please update me on the status of your review of the PMN and recently updated Attachment #4 that I submitted last month.
I think the (2) 15-day suspension periods requested at that time will expire on Monday 11/19 (but I don't think you actually confirmed that after our last phone call).
I am in Japan this week, so coordinating this follow up is a bit of a challenge.
However, I want to ensure the PMN review continues moving forward, on schedule.
Thanks.
